"They want us to keep in touch so they get to know us," said Bartos, now a sport management

More than a dozen employers visited the University to meet with students and make connections. "I sense a lot of excitement from the students I've interacted with," said Brendan O'Halloran. Yale University Athletics was among the possible employers represented at the career fair. 'The impact of the University of New Haven'

The career fair, which also included representatives from the Connecticut Sun, the New York Yankees, and the New York Jets. "The opportunities are huge," he said. "It's all about connecting students with employers. For Bronson, the sport management graduate student, this event was an important step. "The fact that all these employers came here to talk to us shows the impact of the University of New Haven. The career fair brought together students and potential employers.
